VIDEO TAPES READY--

"Conversations with Kenneth Burke," a four-part library of almost eight hours of interviews with Mr. Burke, are now ready for institutional and long-term archival use on eight one-hour U-matic (3/4 inch) videocassettes at a cost of $300 for the set. The series is also available on four two-hour VHS tapes for $60.

The interviews were produced by University of Iowa graduate students from Communication Studies, Comparative Literature, English, the Writers' Workshop, American Studies, Mass Communication and History. Michael Calvin McGee initiated the project which was sponsored by the Department of Communication Studies. Clarke Rountree, Burke Society member, assisted in the planning and execution of the project.

A short guide to "Conversations with Kenneth Burke" is also included with each set. This includes four indexes to the interviews which utilize a small time code in the corner of the videotape, allowing users to quickly locate topics of interest chronologically, topically, by proper name, or by reference to the works of Burke.

The four parts in the series cover the life and work of Burke: the "Literary" Period, 1897-1935; the "Social Criticism" Period, 1935-1945; the "Dramatism" Period, 1945-1961; and, the "Logology" Period, 1961-1986.

KENNETH BURKE AT SCA MEETING:
TENTATIVE SCHEDULE

Mr. Burke will be attending the 1987 SCA Convention in Boston, MA, November 5-7, at the Sheraton-Boston Hotel. Below is KB's tentative schedule at the convention:

Thursday, November 5:

2. SCA No-Host Cocktail Party, Grand Ballroom, 5:30 pm--7:30 pm.

Friday, November 6:

4. "Kenneth Burke: The Iowa Interviews," Beacon A Room, 1:00 pm--2:20 pm. Sponsored by the Kenneth Burke Society, SCA Branch. Mr. Burke is the scheduled respondent.

5. Queens College Cocktail Party In Honor of Kenneth Burke, 9:00 pm to Midnight, in Gary Gumpert's Suite.

Saturday, November 7:

7. Speech Communication Association Awards Luncheon, 11:30 am--2:20 pm. SCA First Vice President Michael Osborn will be formally recognizing Kenneth Burke's contribution to the discipline of communication.
Symbolic action is thus conceptualized as a process across time in which materiality consubstantiates with refinement. "Bodies" as the embodiment of materiality stresses the sense in which the entirety of the act integrates in the life of the biological symbolizer. Burke's discussions stress the total involvement of the body in the transformation and the consubstantiality of the biologic body in the language. "Learn" as the embodiment of the transformation stresses the change as a refinement which retains even as it refines. "Language as the embodiment of symbolic accomplishment stresses the ambiguity between the biologic power and the accomplished fact."

The lesson for rhetorical critics is to abandon the differentiation of symbolic embodiment from reference, of the materiality of language from expression, to abandon the philosophy of instrumentality as "use." Study instead the unique human capacity for the symbolic. Celebrate the magic of symbolic action integrating the uniqueness of each moment into the consubstantiality of time. Practice a critical method which captures the unique magic of this biological species to live each moment with the imperative capacity to integrate dreams, prayers, and charts; to live each moment with the rhetorical power to make a world by negotiating the freedom from, and the submission to, materiality.

NOTES

THE NEXT FORUM will be an "Open Forum." You get to decide what you believe to be the most important issue in Burke studies, or the most controversial issue. Please submit approximately 450 words. Everyone with an opinion is invited! If we are scholars of KB, then most of us have opinions—even strong ones. If you have sent something in the past and it has not appeared, please let the editor know. Include your phone number so a confirmation can be made.

INCLUDED in this middle section are minutes of branch meetings of the Kenneth Burke Society. We include these to encourage you to support your branch, or to support the start of a branch in your professional organization. Having a recognized branch in your organization will help to ensure that programs centering on the study of Burke will be included in conference planning.

THE SOUTHERN AND CENTRAL SPEECH COMMUNICATION ASSOCIATIONS met last April in St. Louis. There were at least two programs that featured Burkean (Burkeian) studies. Bernard Brock, respondent for one of the programs, pointed out that several years ago programs featuring Burke would never have shown the depth of thought and research. The progressive nature of research indicates that having times and places to report research is very important.

WANT TO REPORT A CONFERENCE? Send in your report to the editor. We can add it to the NOTES section that will be a part of all future KBS NEWSLETTERS.

WANT TO MAKE A DONATION? If your business, academic department or college/university would like to donate the cost of publishing the NEWSLETTER, or in-kind material or service, please contact the editor.
Minutes of the
Kenneth Burke Society, ECA Burke
Eastern Communication Association
Syracuse, NY
May 20, 1987

1. Herman Cohen called the meeting to order at 5:35 P.M.

2. Jane Blankenship reported in the absence of Lester Olson, Chair of the 1987 Selection Committee. Following Blankenship's report a discussion took place concerning criteria for selection of papers. The question of papers explicating Burke's theory as contracted to critical applications was explored.

Since a number of excellent papers were not chosen for presentation at the programs of the Kenneth Burke Society, SCA Branch, it was suggested that the readers for the SCA branch encourage the writers of those papers to submit them to the ECA Branch.

3. Jim Klumpp was elected the 1988 Chair of the Kenneth Burke Society, ECA Branch.

4. Cohen called on James Chesebro to explain the necessity for the selection of the chairs of the selection committee for both 1988 and 1989. Chesebro explained that under the present arrangement it is not possible to list the chair for the next convention in the program because that person will not have been selected. The problem will be solved by selecting two chairs in 1987 and by selecting a chair two years in advance in the future. Richard Thames was selected as Chair of the Selection Committee for 1988 and Gaynelle Winograd as Chair for 1989.

5. Gary Woodward reported on the citation presented by the New Jersey Senate to Kenneth Burke in honor of his 90th birthday.

6. Richard Thames encouraged members to search for Burke materials including films, video and audio tapes.

7. It was agreed that Chair Klumpp would consider the appointment of a committee to prepare a constitution for the Kenneth Burke Society, ECA Branch.

8. The meeting was adjourned at 6:25 P.M.

Where does the title "bodies that learn language" take us in terms of reducing the philosophy of dramatism to its essence? It takes us toward a literal interpretation of what action is. In the ordinary sense of the term, we cannot get more "literal" than to say that our theoretical enterprise focuses on bodies that learn language.

So, then, persons literally "act." That cannot be denied. And it gives us, it seems to me, about as much insight into the process of communication as Neo-Aristotelian theory and criticism, which also take an "actional" view of rhetoric. That is to say, the literal, physicalist approach to language as drama gives us quite a bit of insight, but not enough.

I prefer the reduction Burke offers in the Grammar: The "basic unit of action" as "the human body in purposeful motion." Here, in the word "purposeful," there are more hints and suggestions of not just an act in progress, but also of an act in a scene. There are aspects of this definition a behaviorist cannot get at. Symbol-generated purposes are not phenomenal. They are spiritual. This earlier definition is more "physicalist-plus."

Looking at the most recent reduction dialectically and critically, I see it as a compensation for a perceived weakness being the inadmissibility of privileged texts when those texts are examined dramatically. If all language is drama, Burke's language is drama. If words conceal as well as reveal, induce attention away from as well as induce attention toward, so do Burke's. If the "paradox of substance" gives to all predication a gossamer, scenic, contextual, connotative, indeed metaphorical quality, it does so likewise to Burke's predications.

All definition is negation. We define something in terms of what it is not. Linguistically, what something is in itself is something that is not itself. Furthermore, in every communicative act the "entelechial dog" and the "tautological dog" follow swift on the heals of the "lexical dog." Oppositions like literal vs. nonliteral, correspondence vs. noncorrespondence, and factual vs. fictional shape the rhetorical environment in undramatic ways, draw the lines, make the cuts, unsatisfactorily. My authority on that is Kenneth Burke.
